

The F.A.M.I.L.Y. Project

Families Accessing Multicultural Learning with our Youth (onsite at POOR Magazine Campus) Free of charge for children of staff, students and resident scholars at The Race, Poverty and Media Justice Institute

The F.A.M.I.L.Y. Project is a collaborative project of A.R.T. (Artistikal Revolutionary Teaching) and POOR Magazine and is dedicated to providing a multigenerational learning environment and multi-media arts based social justice curriculum to children, youth and elders in the Bay Area. Our aim is to have families facilitate this process of community learning through facilitating various cultural advocacy creative expressions and socially conscious actions.

POOR Magazine and A.R.T. believe in honoring our ancestors, family involvement and providing quality education, interdependency and childcare to support families who are struggling with poverty.

We believe in the parent being the primary teacher.

We believe it takes a village to raise a child.
